“Zelda, Musings from the First American Flapper”

an original one-woman play with talented actress and singer

Rita Parisi

Thursday, March 10, '11

3 pm – Simoni Room

After the death of her husband, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Zelda Sayre Fitzgerald rummages through the effects of her life in the attic of her mother's home in Montgomery, AL in 1940. Every item and its associated memory reveals to the audience the life of a woman who was more than the beautiful muse and the mentally unstable flapper wife to one of the greatest "lost generation" writers. Parisi's play is a tribute to an often misunderstood woman who was also a mother, a dancer, an exhibited artist and a published writer.

Rita Parisi has over 15 years experience performing throughout New England and in the metropolitan New York area. She has performed in musical, dramatic, improvisational as well as interactive theatre. In addition to her stage work, she is also involved in Boston's film scene. Her films have been premiered at the Boston International Film Festival and the Cannes Film Festival.
